Swimming, Day 5 - Women's 4x200m free: USA confirms supremacy with fifth win in six editions

Pedro Adrega and Sarah Chiarello, FINA Communications Department

In the last final of the evening session, the duel between USA and Australia turned out in favour of the North Americans, who got their fifth title in six editions, touching home in 7:45.14. The winners started very strong, with Katie Ledecky swimming the first 200m in 1:56.32, but then the Australians got some advantage after the efforts of Kylie Palmer and Brittany Elmslie. USA closed the quartet with Missy Franklin, who clocked an impressive 1:54.27 to provide gold to her team. Australia earned silver in 7:47.08, while the bronze went for France in 7:48.43. This podium was a copy of the 2012 Olympic top-3 ranking, but in London all these three teams had swum faster.

The United States clearly dominate the event since the previous edition of the FINA World Championships in Barcelona, in 2003. From then, only one title escaped to the North Americans, when the Chinese quartet was the fastest in Rome, in 2009, establishing the present World Record in the event (7:42.08). At the Palau Sant Jordi, the Asian team stayed at the podium's door, finishing fourth in 7:49.79.

World Record: China, 7:42.08 – July 30, 2009 in Rome (ITA)

Championships Record: China, 7:42.08 – July 30, 2009 in Rome (ITA)

QUOTES:

Gold medal team: USA

Katie Ledecky: "It was pretty awesome. It's my first relay with the US team and I'm very proud of them. Being here with 3 Olympians is just amazing, also representing my country and watching our flag between the crowd is just amazing. Winning the gold medal is something I will never forget."

Silver medal team: Australia

Kylie Palmer: "After last year's Olympic silver medal and coming back this year and win the silver, it's a very good start for us."

Bronze medal team: France

Camille Muffat: "We fought well, we were closer to USA and Australia than last year. The relay is evolving year after year, I'm very happy we came third because China was not far behind."
